

Please do not allow this proceeding to diminish the protection I receive from Indiana's Telephone Privacy law. Spam via the telephone is even more intrusive via the email. Since the privacy law went into effect I have peaceful evenings and weekends. My home is no longer invaded by unwanted calls during dinner and my time for solitude after work. I get phone service to stay in touch with friends and family; not for people to solicit me at every waking hour of the day. At least with email, I can turn off the computer sound and delete spam email without little effort. It's a little hard for a telephone system to function without sound and during unwanted calls. As an attorney and a phone subscriber, I like that the Privacy Law gives me some control over a service I pay. Otherwise, these unwanted callers get to invade my privacy on my dime. Thanks in advance for your consideration of my brief comment.
